Roberts said, "I have to say, he has no good news anywhere. There's not much of a story. He's in a battle with Republicans on health care, on taxes, on a potential government shutdown. They're not responding to the scandals, if you will. So, he's not doing very well, but he does have some ability to change the direction of the party. And with the Republican Party in disarray, he may, on balance, march to re-election."
