[Treatment of posthemorrhagic hydrocephalus with ventricular drainage and CSF derivation in an infant]. A term male infant was delivered by cesarean section at 35 weeks gestation due to the birth weight of 3631 grams. An umbilical discharge of 500 cc was observed on the 1st day. As the 4th day, a prolonged fit of crying and convulsion was observed. A cranial CT scan showed a subarachnoid hemorrhage (SAH) and ventriculomegaly. An external ventricular drainage (EVD) with intracranial pressure monitor was started immediately. 2 days after EVD, progressive ventricular enlargement was noted. For that reason, bilateral ventriculoperitoneal shunt was performed and right-sided external drainage catheter was removed. After the shunt operation, the shunt function was stable. He showed no neurological deficit at discharge. One year after the onset, follow-up MRI confirmed the disappearance of intracranial hematoma and ventricular enlargement. A right EVD was observed again. Serum electrolytes were not changed and the ventricular drainage was removed. He was diagnosed as congenital hydrocephalus with SAH, and he was readmitted at the age of 1 year. A second ventriculoperitoneal shunt was performed for congenital hydrocephalus.5 min read Ladybug Has The Most Dramatic 'Ladybug Ladybug' Reaction Ever Samantha King has always enjoyed spending time with animals, which is why she chose to study veterinary science. She became particularly fond of working with red-eared slider turtles in college, and when a family friend came by to tell her that one of her students had red-eared slider turtles of her own, she knew she had to step up and make some extra room. Samantha and her students recently adopted the red-eared slider turtles and, as you can see in the above video, they got pretty close pretty quickly. This isn't a new thing, though. Samantha has previously adopted chickens, ducks and rabbits, so she knows a thing or two

A: I think you should be able to download it by choosing the.iso file in the following form Q: Can InnoDB or Xtradb, or even mysqld.opt, be set to auto-remove tables? Is there a way to have InnoDB or Xtradb, or mysqld.opt, be set to automatically remove old tables? InnoDB has the option autoremove, which sounds perfect for the purposes of my app. I want to start each session with a fresh table. A: Since MySQL 5.6.17, you can use AUTO_INCREMENT to help you to keep your tables clean. From the manual: Auto increment values are not counted against the system maximum. Additionally, data values in an AUTO_INCREMENT column are not stored. The storage space used by auto-increment values is usually small, typically only 8 bytes on 4-byte systems. Therefore, InnoDB normally uses 8 bytes to store the column value, regardless of the column's data type. You can see the column value in data dictionary views. This is explained in the following article. A: Yes, mysql innodb has a 'autocommit' option that can cause it to clean up old tables automatically. This is the default, so it is set to be quiet. I believe mysqld.opt isn't helpful in this case. You can use SHOW TABLE STATUS to determine which table has a MyISAM engine. In that case, you can run ALTER TABLE table ENGINE=Innodb;. To build up an index, INSERT and UPDATE on that table, the table will be dropped if the table drops. I would recommend adding DROP INDEX at the same time as the CREATE INDEX and ALTER TABLE. Another option is to set the session variable innodb_purge_threads_current = 1. This will cause a write lock on all tables that have an InnoDB engine. If you don't have a DROP INDEX in place, then the table will be dropped by MyISAM for each INSERT, UPDATE, or ba244e880a
