A: In windows: right click on the file open with: notepad.exe copy and paste the content. Q: Can I use the CUDA SDK for the Cygwin environment on Linux? I'm developing a project for the CUDA GPUs on Linux using the Cygwin environment on Windows. Can I use the CUDA SDK to build/compile and deploy the application, or will I need to install the libraries on the Linux machine? A: CUDA already provides precompiled binaries for Windows (Windows XP/Vista/7/8) and Linux (Debian/Redhat/SUSE/Ubuntu) platforms. A: you can use the pre-compiled tools from the CDT and/or the SDK. the SDK also provides a cross-platform makefile that you can use with only the cdt, which will compile your code and host it on your system. most of the time you will not have to build from the source. just make sure to have the correct version of the toolset installed, and you should be able to build for any version of windows 1.
