How do you indicate a missing, zero-valued field in a React application? Case 1: A form input field is not present on a form. So it will result in the following: Case 2: The value is missing from an object. So it will result in the following: I would like to see some example of how this is used. I'm not asking for a complete solution, just some clue on how to handle this scenario. A: In the beginning of your application you can listen to changes on some of the fields and display it in some nice way. For example, if you have a field on your form and it have some default value (like a current date) set, you could write something like this: Object.keys(this.props).forEach(field => { if(!this.state[field]){ //set default value, or do whatever you want for empty fields } }); I prefer to trigger event whenever a value is changed on the fields so I can update my front-end components in the same time. Example: The city of the future is not in space, but in the minds of the academics and administrators who have been tasked with imagining it. At least, that's the impression I got from a visit to the MIT Futures & Habitation Lab's office on the fifth floor of the Low-Energy Building. The lab is created by the Massachusetts Institute of Technology and the nonprofit Futures Without Science Fiction and, like many futurist groups, it exists to spark conversations in which experts debate the future of living on Earth. Inside the lab's office, I saw images of future super-economies, space-based terraforming, and the long-lived and ever-gaining single person. The futurists admit that they don't know where such ideas might lead, but that they're happy to fuel discussion among researchers and entrepreneurs in an effort to find new ways of improving ba244e880a
