However, the user needs to use base 10 numbers, not some other base. In other words, the user may enter something like -54, 123, or any base 10 number that may be entered without any base being specified. If the user inputs a base 10 number, I want the function to return the correct integer. If not, the function should raise an error. Here is the code I have so far. I am trying to use try and except, however, it does not seem to be working. import math def convertToDecimal(base10Number): try: #possible ways to convert to decimal, and raise error print "Enter base 10 number." input = float(raw_input()) #return integer return int(input) except ValueError: print "You may only enter a base 10 number." base10Input = raw_input() convertToDecimal(base10Input) A: You can use the keybd_event API to handle user input from raw_input in your Python program. So, you could do something like this: import win32api, sys def keybd_event(vk, key, flags, param): kbd = win32api.GetKeyboard() char = kbd.raw_input() print char if __name__ == '__main__': keybd_event(0x56, 0, 0, "") This code will wait for the user to press

To compare perceived health and health-related quality of life (HRQOL) in a head and neck cancer patient population and to examine the impact of self-reported HRQOL in correlation with factors that influence disease or treatment outcome. Retrospective study. University-affiliated academic center. Random sample of 100 patients with head and neck cancer who were treated with surgery, radiation, or surgery followed by radiotherapy. Self-reported perceived health measured using the 8-item General Self-Assessment Questionnaire (GSAQ) and HRQOL measured using the European Organization for Research and Treatment of Cancer Quality of Life Questionnaire C30 (EORTC QLQ-C30) and the head and neck module C30 version 3 (HNQOL) were reported in a web-based questionnaire. One-way analysis of variance was performed to compare perceived health and HRQOL scores with standard reference samples. Self-reported health measured using the GSAQ and HRQOL measured using the EORTC QLQ-C30 and HNQOL. were statistically significantly lower in patients with head and neck cancer compared with the general population (P Ohi- ba244e880a
