I start sweating and seeing spots. This past year, it was the time of the year we had to be at my in-laws for a few days during my birthday weekend and I had plenty of time to start planning. It just so happens my birthday is today! Whoops! I must be getting old. Instead of trying to plan out the entirety of the season and not having any spare time to do so, I'm going to do a few little things in the upcoming weeks that I hope you'll love. Planning for fall is kind of tricky because fall is so long and it really shouldn't be tied to school schedules. That being said, I'm definitely planning some things that will give me some free time throughout the month of October (like the corn maze on Friday!) and also some things that will only happen in the fall and then some things that will start happening in September that I'm going to squeeze in between my birthday festivities. Since it's still August, I've been planning the pumpkin patch at the zoo. This will be my fourth time going to this one, but since they moved it to their new location, the entrance is a bit of a hike. I know, I'm that lame. But I love it! It's fun to get a treat for each of my kids for their first time going through the zoo. So excited! I hope you have fun planning for fall, too. As for me, I need to be more excited about fall because I can feel myself going into the dreaded sweating stage. See you soon!

Happy Birthday, Barb! 5 thoughts on "Why I can't wait for fall" I
