The Other App Store - keiferski ===== mbrundle All the time I've used the iOS App Store, I've been frustrated by the exclusivity of the platform. I don't want to pay for a service to be able to use it. I'm constantly torn between my need to support the work of people making awesome things, and my desire to spend my money on hardware I love. The App Store is essentially putting the clock on this development and forcing me to purchase (to use) something I might have bought anyway. This feels like a real setback for the development of the apps I care about. This is all very frustrating and selfish. I feel like I'm being put in a very unfair situation where I've grown to love my smartphone as a tool and I have no right to ask for anything else as an investment. Control of Escherichia coli O157:H7 in Tohoku Farms by the Spraying of

Bacillus subtilis Strain OKN052. Control of Escherichia coli O157:H7 on the farm was studied in three Tohoku Japanese farms. Seven strains of B. subtilis OKN052 with different spray levels were tested for their ability to inactivate E. coli O157:H7. The effects of the spray levels of two strains were tested. Inactivation
