If you are new to the world of digital audio, you'll find that there is more than enough information in here to get you. "up and running". You'll probably find .Q: Get Current Directory Path of Process How can I get the directory path of the current process's executable file? Using C++ (windows) A: You can use: `std::string mypath(__FILE__);` See what `__FILE__` means here. A: To list all directories in the current process, you can use the Directory class: `char buffer[PATH_MAX]; // Get current directory directory path string. std::string path = std::wctombs(buffer, nullptr, GetCurrentDirectory()); //... // If path is shorter than PATH_MAX characters, then the buffer is too short, otherwise it contains the actual directory. Note that this will return the path of the current directory of the process you use it from, so you need to make sure that the process you use it from is the one that actually executes the file. It isn't a cross-platform solution, but you could use the GetExecutablePath function, which is probably your best bet for a cross-platform solution. A: This is a cross-platform solution I've found for the current working directory: #include #include #include const char* GetCurrentWorkingDirectory() { DWORD dw = ::GetCurrentDirectory(0, NULL); return (dw!= 0 && dw!= (DWORD)-1)? dw : "" ; } It uses GetCurrentDirectory, which is available only on Windows. Tackling identity issues in the Super League Warrington Wolves were the first of a clutch of clubs to have players exposed when it was revealed they were part of a 'secret' Leeds United scouting network. The very first inkling that something unusual was happening in the corridors of power at Elland Road was the drip-feed release of information on Leeds`
