Morphologic analysis was performed on the capillary bed of islets transplanted under the renal capsule of streptozotocin-induced diabetic Wistar rats. Immunocytochemical staining was performed with anti-neuron-specific enolase (NSE), anti-rat endothelial cell antigen 2/anti-rat endothelial cell antigen I (RECA-2/RECA-I), anti-major histocompatibility complex (MHC) antigens (Ia-like antigens), anti-endothelial cell adhesion molecule (E-CAM), and anti-vascular cell adhesion molecule (VCAM)-1 monoclonal antibodies to examine the time course of the development of the blood-endothelium barrier (BEB) and the intercapillary distribution of islets transplanted. The results of the combined staining suggest that although MHC class II expression was observed on the capillary endothelial cells, Ia-like antigens were expressed predominantly on the CD8+ T lymphocytes and Ia-like antigens were expressed on macrophages infiltrating the islets at 20 days posttransplantation. These findings indicate that the lack of endothelial cell diversity and heterogeneity in capillary beds of the transplanted islets was not reflected by an immunologic reaction to the allograft, as might be predicted by previous studies with allogeneic islets transplantation. Therefore, the development of the BEB was thought to be delayed at 20 days posttransplantation. 2 3 0 + 1 2 6 = 3 * w + 4 * d , - w

John Kasich wants to be that guy. The guy who says what other people don't want to hear. The guy who gets into fights with people. The guy who, most of the time, is overlooked. The guy who says, "No, really, NO. I'm not the guy you are looking for." And for more than a year, Kasich, the party's only serious candidate to run against Donald Trump, has been saying it. For the part of the primary voters who support him, the strategy makes sense. Here's a guy who's been running against Trump for 17 months. He's ahead, and he's looking like he's the GOP's best chance at beating Hillary Clinton. For most of his supporters, it doesn't seem like he can win. So he says it. But as the race has unfolded, it's become clear that Kasich has put his foot in his mouth more times than he's called out the other candidates for their spats. And these personal jabs have taken place in real time, all of them public. On Wednesday, Kasich's name became the only one on a list of 30 potential Supreme Court nominees — a list President Obama is considering. He was mentioned by name in interviews with reporters Wednesday afternoon, as the subject of a late-night Twitter feud with Obama. 570a42141b
