To determine the long-term predictors of death due to chronic obstructive pulmonary disease (COPD) in a population-based study. Prospective, population-based cohort study in Victoria, Australia, 2000-2002, with mortality follow-up until 2004. One thousand and ten participants aged 45+ years at baseline. Baseline predictors assessed included age, sex, height, body mass index (BMI), smoking status, education level, occupation, C-reactive protein (CRP), forced expiratory volume in one second (FEV1), and forced vital capacity (FVC). Cox proportional hazards regression was used to determine the relationship between baseline predictors and COPD mortality. During the 4-year follow-up, 448 participants died. The multivariate analyses showed that BMI, age, smoking status, CRP, and FVC were significantly and independently related to mortality. The model showed a greater risk of mortality for participants with lower BMI than for those with a higher BMI, and that the risk was greatest at lower BMI values. The risk of mortality in smoking individuals was higher than in non-smoking individuals. Higher CRP and lower FVC were predictive of greater mortality in this population-based cohort.(IraqiNews.com) Baghdad – A statement of Al-Hayat News Agency, quoted Reuters, said the Iraqi government forces have seized the strategic town of Garma and the nearby village of Qal’at Sherqat from ISIS terrorists in the province of Salaheddin. A security source told Al-Hayat News Agency, “the Iraqi army, security forces and popular mobilization units have seized Garma in Salaheddin province, including the village of Al-Garma, and the town of Qalat Sherkat that was under ISIS control.” Q: Constraining a class to inherit from the type System.Web. 3e33713323
