(Photo: Elena Kouznetsova / RIA Novosti / Kremlin.ru) MOSCOW — The Kremlin has signaled that it is ready for a broad arms reduction treaty at the G20 summit in Hamburg, Germany, in mid-July. The arms reduction meeting will take place on July 7 in the meeting room at the Royal Golf Club in the Elbphilharmonie, which will be co-hosted by Russia and Germany. The Kremlin confirmed the signal made by Russian President Vladimir Putin in an interview with the journalists at the St. Petersburg International Economic Forum on Friday. “A new arms reduction treaty will be signed there, it’s been arranged,” Putin said, adding that the agreement between Russia and the US will be signed in Hamburg as well. Putin said that “we’ve to get rid of a new Cold War, it’s very important.” Last week, a number of US media outlets reported, citing anonymous sources, that a “10-year plan” to reduce nuclear weapons will be presented at the summit. Putin rejected these rumors, adding that the G20 summit will be devoted to “the most important international issues.” “It is very important for us, in this summit, to talk about climate issues, and about a wide range of other issues, from trade and economic issues to global security,” Putin said. The Russian president’s remarks on a possible reduction of nuclear arms were supported by International Affairs Minister Sergey Lavrov, who addressed the conference on Friday. “The world has many and important tasks for the future,” Lavrov said. “We need to secure a positive balance of forces in the world, strengthen the arsenal of peace, and the strengthening of peace.” In June, Russian Ambassador to
