1. Basic editing There are two main ways to edit images in PSE. They include basic editing such as scaling, resizing, cropping, red-eye removal, enhancement, etc. These are called image editing basics and they are detailed below.

1.1 Basic resizing, resizing an image To resize an image, you can either drag the slider at the top of the image window or right-click on the image and choose the best option from the popup menu. If you right-click and choose a resizing option, it will apply it immediately. To select just the crop tool, simply press the Ctrl and Option keys at the same time. You can also resize the image by the option Bar. Go to Edit > Preferences > Toolbar and access the Bar option. You can click the Lock box and use the width or height value. To resize the entire image, click the small box that says Resize Artwork To Crop Box. In the pop-up box, find the desired width and height values. Another way of resizing images in PSE is by using the percentage options on the tools. To change the size of an image using the percentage option, go to Edit > Preferences > Tools. The tools that allow you to resize an image by the percentage are Size and Crop. In the Size item, you can access the values of the X and Y options to specify the width and height of the image. Crop tool 1.2 Basic cropping, cropping an image The basic tool to crop an image in PSE is either of the two. You can use the Crop tool on the main screen or from the toolbar. NL West Now Commenting On: Lowe set to open final home stand against Rays Email Print

Gutierrez's solo homer 0:47 3/31/13: Colby Rasmus hits a solo shot over the wall in center field for his fifth homer of the season in the bottom of the third By Rhet Bollinger / MLB.com | ST.
PETERSBURG -- A day before opening up their final homestand of the season, the Astros checked out of the Tropicana Field Hotel, leaving all of their equipment behind. They're ready to dig in against the Rays, whom they're tied for third in the AL East with the Blue Jays. But as they prepare for a weekend series against the division-rival Rays, the Astros didn't make any big additions to their lineup. Instead, the third-place team is splitting up its regulars. "We try to go with the matchups, and you've got to be aware of [what else] is going on," manager Bo Porter said. "I try to go through and evaluate [the situation]. We're playing Tampa Bay this weekend. The other day, we've got [Carlos] Vidal [in the lineup]. If we're going to have them back-to-back days, we usually look at what our matchups are." That's especially helpful to a team like the Astros, who have more lineup shifts in the last two months than any other team in Major League Baseball. "We try to go with the matchups," Porter said. "The matchups can be tough, because if you have good matchups, pitchers are good matchups, but you can get into some situations where pitchers aren't good matchups. That's been one of the big challenges -- going out there and playing good matchups because you don't want to kill the pitcher. That's been one of the hardest things, is not to do it and try to maintain. That's not what we're about. That's what we've been challenged with." Lowe could make his return to action HOUSTON -- The Astros are set to have three pitchers in the bullpen against the Rays. But thanks to a quad injury sustained Sunday, Chris Devenski is still on the mend. It's possible that left-hander Dallas Keuchel will return to action in the bullpen Friday. "I don't know what the

What's New In?

The invention relates to a device for determining the quality of an automotive fuel, this device is particularly suited for determining the quality of a gasoline and Diesel fuel. It is known that for vehicles that have an engine, such as motor vehicles, the quality of the fuel injected into the engine and consumed by it is critical to the operation of the engine and the performance of the vehicle, and hence to the operating safety of the driver. One of the parameters for evaluating the quality of the fuel is the amount of "unburned" hydrocarbons (HC) in the fuel. There are many methods used to determine the concentration of unburned HC, e.g. measuring the smell emitted from the fuel, or various analytical measurements such as measurement of the refraction index of the fuel, or measurement of its carbon content, or of its oxidation indicators. Many methods are currently employed, but the measuring device is not very widely used, because they are expensive, complex and difficult to use. A simple measuring system that is currently sold in the market for evaluating the quality of a Diesel fuel is the Romblens "Pourpoint" meter. This device is a hand-held device that is held in the corner of the mouth. The fuel is initially drawn from the canister of the vehicle into a measuring chamber, and then through a measurement tube into the meter. The position of the mouth on the tube is varied and a read-out signal is indicated. A "good" reading on the read-out signal corresponds to a Diesel fuel that meets specifications. However, the accuracy of the "pour-point" readings is limited, is not very widely used, and is not very reliable. Other methods for determining the quality of fuel are based on measuring the parameters of a Diesel engine. These methods are complex and expensive. There is a need to develop a system and apparatus to evaluate the quality of a fuel with a view to reducing the cost of measuring the fuel quality, and improving the accuracy of measuring.Q:
