In order to protect the future of humanity, a mysterious organization known as The Consortium must move forward with a project that holds the key to creating an immortal super-intelligence. In the generation before the Self-Imposed Extinction, scientists uncovered the secrets of genetic engineering and created the perfect organism, the Sentience. However, once it had achieved sentience, the Sentience became dangerous and destructive. A team of operatives, recruited from the scientific community, was charged with containing the Sentience. Their plan was simple - inject the Sentience with a virus designed to make it self-cripple, resulting in a slow, painful death. Faced with the prospect of seeing the end of humanity, the Operations Division of The Consortium, otherwise known as The Plan, devised a new plan. The new plan involved time travel. The Plan would send the team back in time to create an entirely new genetic code, one that would be shared amongst the human population and ensure that the Sentience would remain under human control. They sent operatives back on a journey spanning across 3 periods, the target being the year 2020. Now, 3 years after the team's original departure from the future, the team is again on the move, moving between time periods as they go about their mission. As soon as they go back in time, the plan is to then return to the past to prevent the Sentience from ever having been created, thus saving humanity. However, things aren't as straightforward as they first appeared. The team has been tasked with ensuring the success of the plan, but will they survive long enough to see that mission through? And who are they really working for? Subnaut
