Portable Xcalday With License Key

Xcalday is a very simple day calendar that can hold notes for each day in the month. The notes are displayed in a somewhat popup dialog. You can put the notes anywhere in the dialog and they will be saved for future use. Other features include autosave, undo, and resizing. Xcalday Version History: Version 1.3 (Jun 18, 2011): * Improved clean-up of resource files in the release package. * Changed the date format to fully support month/year without leading zeros. * Added autosave and undo. * Improved the button control to reduce the chance of default "pressed" state. * Added better error messages for when the input was invalid. Version 1.2 (Jul 18, 2010): * Bug Fix: Error messages are now printed to the Output Preview window. * Added better error messages for when the input was invalid. * Added the ability to modify the size of the dialog window by dragging any of the four edge/corner grips. * Autosave will now try to save whenever a new message is written. * Added "Undo" button which will reverse the last action if the action was made to a note field. Version 1.1 (May 10, 2010): * Fixed some bugs and updated the license to be more clear. Version 1.0 (Mar 25, 2010): * Initial Release For a screenshot, press the "?" button at the top of the main window. To close the "Input Notes" dialog, click the "Cancel" button. Resources: A: I'm rather fond of this page: A: I use Online-Cal-Mail and YAMiCal to do this. I use them together to sync with my Palm. Online-Cal-Mail is free and has been the gold standard of Google Calendar programs for awhile now. YAMiCal is free but a bit buggy so I think I paid for it later on. /***** Copyright 2015 Ufora Inc. Licensed under the Apache License, Version 2.0
