Chapter 1: Basic Practices Overview In this chapter, you learn the basics of good image design. You don't need Photoshop to create images that communicate well, but having Photoshop is useful for making large-scale files, and it's a must for designing and editing images for the Web. And you can achieve professional results right from the program. To make good images, you must understand both your subject and the medium that you're working with. You must have a clear idea of how to express the look you want to create in the image. You must have a solid foundation in color and grayscale. Art schools teach young people how to draw and paint. However, the curriculum requires that they spend time learning how to do this in three dimensions. Most art school graduates don't develop the ability to translate their ideas into a three-dimensional image that works. Most of them don't understand why it's a good idea to be able to paint an object in three dimensions. This is where Photoshop comes in. Artists can use it to create a three-dimensional image of their subject. They need to spend time developing their own style and understanding how the program works. Photoshop is also the program of choice for some fashion photographers. Why Use Photoshop? This question is posed most often. But the real answer is that Photoshop can do most of the things that a competent amateur photographer and image editor can do, and better. In my view, all photographers should use Photoshop to make their images better. Professionals have different software for some tasks, but most photographers should have Photoshop. Professionals, such as fashion photographers, may use other programs

Control of Listeria monocytogenes with an aloe-based edible coating. The effect of Aloe vera extract incorporated into aqueous protein (casein) dispersion was studied on the viability of Listeria monocytogenes during chilled storage. The aloe-protein coating had a bacteriostatic effect on L. monocytogenes only at coating concentrations > or = 5%. At a coating level of 20%, the viable count decreased to approximately 2 logs. Inoculation of the coating at ambient temperature, however, resulted in a non-significant decrease in viable count on stored frankfurters at 4 degrees C. The effect of the coating on the growth and survival of L. monocytogenes during storage was also studied. The aloe extract used in the coating had no effect on L. monocytogenes growth and survival at concentration up to 20%, as there were no significant differences in the numbers of cells recovered. The viable counts of L. monocytogenes decreased significantly with increasing coating concentrations. Further, the viability of L. monocytogenes was not affected by the aloe-based coating at 4 degrees C, 8 degrees C and 12 degrees C, while significantly lower numbers were recovered on the uncoated control at these storage temperatures. In conclusion, the use of aloe-based coating may be promising as a preservative system for cold-stored frankfurters.A key contract to build a downtown terminal for Delta Air Lines was awarded to a Massachusetts firm instead of the company's Detroit choice, despite the proposal being higher-rated by agency experts than the Detroit plan. Detroit's award of the $30 million project to Cintas Corp. was announced Monday by Delta, trumpeting the departure of Cintas from a nearly 15-year relationship. The strike-driven Detroit selection, made four years ago, was the key to a $1.3 billion total deal to ensure Delta had a two-terminal Detroit fleet through at least 2037. Also Monday, the Detroit Regional Chamber and Renaissance Windsor announced they have signed a pact to work together to address the north region's economy. The two cities remain competitive despite the nation's resurgent automotive sector, with Windsor and the province's other manufacturing hubs ranking as some of the country's best places to live and work. The two met last week to develop the [Increased plasma levels of prourokinase and decreased plasma levels of plasminogen activator inhibitor 1 in patients with thrombotic thrombocytopenic purpura (TTP)]. Thrombotic thrombocytopenic purpura (TTP) is a thrombotic microangiopathy characterized by a consumptive coagulopathy associated with hemolytic anemia and thrombocytopenia. To characterize proteolytic mechanisms in TTP, we measured the plasma level of prourokinase (pro-UK) in 12 patients with TTP and the plasma levels of prourokinase/plasminogen activator inhibitor-1 (pro-UK/PAI-1) complex in six patients. In 12 patients with TTP, the plasma levels of pro-UK were in the normal range. The plasma levels of pro-UK in patients with severe thrombocytopenia (median 9,612 microg/L, range 1,157-17,282 microg/L) were significantly higher than those with mild to moderate thrombocytopenia (median 667 microg/L, range 454-1,116 microg/L, P 0 0 6 5 2 r o u n d e d t o 5 d e c i m a l p l a c e s ?
