Good luck! As children we may have heard the expression "Beware of stranger danger". The fear of being harmed by strangers is not justified. According to the National Institute of Justice, most sexual assaults are committed by someone the victim knows (e.g. husband, partner, family members). However, it is possible that the person committing a sexual assault may not be a stranger at all. Common scenarios Let's look at some of the more common scenarios of sexual assaults: Stranger on the Street A person is waiting for the train or a bus. While waiting, they decide to sit down on a park bench and rest. At some point, this person invites the victim to sit with them. As the person offers to buy the victim a coffee or soda, they are suddenly surrounded by many people that the victim did not notice. During the conversation, the person who was just sitting there is suddenly next to the victim and attempts to assault the victim. The person attempts to get past the victim and the other people to leave. It is important to remember that the location and the people present are the actions of the offender. It is the actions that bring the offender into contact with 1cb139a0ed
