The text files it creates use plain text format for the records and they can be edited to be even more customized. The program comes in two versions, a free and a commercial one. The free version allows you to create up to 100 record files at a time, with the records of up to 10 pages of text. Pagez allows you to create records with any file extension you want, so you don't even need to specify the original file format when saving the printout. Pagez will detect the correct format automatically. Pagez is a very good program and should not be considered a serious option if you're looking for a full-fledged printing solution.
