What's New in Dark Current Enable Tool Crack Free Download: 1. Can be used with any Nikon camera model which uses an APS-C sized sensor. 2. Updated GUI for user interface and configuration. 3. Added "Use default settings for RAW process" option to save users some clicks while setting this value. 4. Updated compatibility with newer versions of the software. One of the most interesting functions of the Dark Current feature in the D500/D500s is that it provides astrophotographers with the opportunity to change the light curve of a photo (the slope of the graph of the light distribution in the photo). In general, there is a program for the D500 that can perform this function, but it is no longer available in the new generation of cameras. In this article, we will learn how to change the light curve in a photo of an astrophoto with the Dark Current tool in the D500/D500s. The Dark Current feature provides astrophotographers with the opportunity to change the light curve of a photo. In general, the D500 can perform this function, but it is no longer available in the new generation of cameras. In this article, we will learn how to change the light curve of a photo with the Dark Current tool in the D500/D500s. This procedure is very simple. We will proceed to the following steps: Turn on the camera. Install the Dark Current feature in the camera and allow it to function. Enable the Dark Current feature in the settings, by moving the slider to the right. Open the photo that you want to correct and click on the photo in the preview window. Press and hold the [Playback] button to go to a navigation menu. Select the "Custom Settings" option. Select the "Dark Current" function. Set the interval value for "Auto-dark current off delay" to a higher value (in our example, 15 s), and press OK. We can also set the "Auto-dark current" interval
