We have also reviewed, and have found without merit, Quave’s complaints regarding the competency of trial counsel during voir dire. The record shows that trial counsel conducted the voir dire, completed most of the jury questionnaires, engaged Quave in a colloquy regarding an issue of intent, argued a lesser-included offense to the jury, and complained to the trial court that Quave was not understanding the purpose of jury selection. Counsel cannot be said to have made a professional error when he “made a conscious decision to pursue certain 570a42141b
