JAMES JOHNSON.Cerebral venous sinus thrombosis in children. Thirty consecutive pediatric patients with cerebral venous sinus thrombosis (CVST) treated at our institute were retrospectively reviewed. Of these, 30.6% were infants less than 1 month old, 17.5% were under 1 year, 17.5% were between 1 and 3 years, 25% were between 3 and 9 years, and 16.6% were older than 9 years. The incidence of CVST increased with advancing gestational age. While CVST was rarely found in infants less than 1 month old, it occurred more commonly in the 1- to 3-year age group. In the older age group, CVST was far more common than in children of the same age, indicating that CVST gradually progresses with age and that the increased incidence noted in the 1- to 3-year age group was not due to increased awareness of the disease. The most common cause of CVST in infants was central nervous system infection while trauma was the most common underlying etiology in older children. Fifteen (50%) patients had associated neurological deficits, 14 of whom were infants. The mortality rate was 20%. Association between benzophenanthrine, caffeine and ecstasy use in ecstasy users in a prison population. Cocaine- and ecstasy-related deaths occur more frequently when there is an association with benzophenanthrine (BZP), caffeine (CAF), or both substances in the blood. In a series of retrospective cross-sectional studies in a prison population (n = 297), BZP and CAF levels and ecstasy use were compared with urine samples for conventional pharmacological parameters. The prevalence of BZP- and CAF-positive urine samples was higher in individuals who took ecstasy (12.5%) than those who did not (3.7%). The odds ratio [OR, 95% confidence interval (CI)] for positive results of BZP, CAF and both substances together was OR: 4.1 (95% CI 1.5-11 3da54e8ca3
