Sera from 77 Japanese patients with chronic hepatitis B virus (HBV) infection were screened for HBV genotypes. They were identified as having genotype B by the single strand conformation polymorphism (SSCP) method, but differed in banding patterns. Genotyping of intragenic sequences by use of hybridization to nested PCR products confirmed that these subjects carried B/d and B/c recombinants. Thus, this study indicates the wide prevalence of B/d recombinants in Japan. Amyloid-beta25-35 peptide (A beta25-35) and pathogenesis of prion-like alterations in vitro and in vivo. Prion diseases are infectious neurodegenerative diseases that are characterized by the accumulation of an abnormal prion protein, PrP^{Sc}, in the central nervous system. The precise mechanism underlying the propagation of PrP^{Sc} remains unclear. We studied the mechanism by which PrP^{Sc} could spread between neurons in vitro and in vivo. We examined the propagation of PrP^{Sc} after the incubation of normal prion protein (PrP(C)) with amyloid-beta (A beta) and its derivatives. PrP(C) was expressed in a neuroblastoma cell line (N2a cells), and the cells were inoculated with PrP(Sc) generated by treating

N2a cells with PrP(Sc) isolated from prion-infected mice. We showed that PrP(Sc) propagated
