It is important to mark the intended purpose of a rater in case more than one script is saved. For this reason there are two default macros, one for each intention. Both macros give a simple to understand output. The second purpose of a MACRO is to create automation with the Rife Generator. That means that a script can be called automatically and produce multiple copies of the pulses at predefined times. For example the frequency of the pulses could be controlled at the same time as the length of the pulses. More complex scripts can also change the number of times that the pulses are repeated. More than one script can be started in this way with different outputs. To test a MACRO, load a script to the rifter. For this example use the Keyboard Script created by Herman Jones. In the picture above the first script (Macro "1") will produce 6 short pulses, the second script (Macro "2") will produce only 1 short pulse. When the second script starts, the first will stop producing pulses. When both macros have been run, the screen will display the generated numbers. Clicking the rifter button will produce the pulses. The script can also be set up to run automatically. In this case the output is displayed as the script is running. To activate an automatic script, set up an external program to start the script with a certain time delay. Use the "Run Key" in the "System/Control Panel" to select the program which starts the script. What's New In?

I used a Macbook Pro as a host running OS X 10.9.5 and the Rife Generator as a Rife Device. For scripting the Rife Generator I installed the Rife Generator GUI on the Macbook Pro. The GUI communicates with the Rife Generator via TCP/IP. It is installed as a plug-in for Rufus. Usage: If you execute the 'Run Rife Generator Script' button in the GUI, it will start the Rife Generator Script (.rts) that you have just created. In the script you can do whatever you want to with the Rife Generator. For example, you can control the frequency, amplitude, duration, cycle count, etc., of the pulse signals. Some examples are shown below: In a pulse pattern you can use to cycle between different pulse patterns. to change the amplitude and frequency of the waveform. to change the duration of the pulses. to change the cycle count. to execute a command. In the 'Generate Pulses' section you can do some basic things like changing the frequency, duration, etc. In the 'Script Script' section you can set things like the position of the slider and the target frequency. You can also configure the scaling factor between the frequency of the Rife Generator and the target frequency. This is a very powerful feature since you can set it to 100, for example. Then, the Rife Generator will respond in accordance to the original theory of Rife, or you can set it to 100 to achieve the same effect as with Rife. In this way you can use the Rife Generator to measure something. For example, if you want to measure the magnetization in a hysteresis curve, you can set the Rife Generator to 100 and then use it to set the amplitude and the frequency of the pulses. The result of this measurement can then be compared to the results you got from Rife. The Rife Generator Script also can be used to create long file names. Examples: Examples of how to use the scripts are shown below. Script 1: Script 2: Script 3: Script 4: Script 5: Script 6: Script 7: Script 8: Script 9: Script 10: Script 11: Script 12: Script 13: Script 14: Script 15: Script 16: Script 17: Script 18: Script 19: Script 20: Script 21: Script 22: Script 23: Script 24: Script 25: Script 26: Script 27: Script 28: Script 29: Script 30: Script 31: Script 32:
