Players are isolated and measured in a 3D mapping space using a 10-camera system, which the developer describes as "the most precise and immersive football tracking in any previous game."

"Our goal was to create an authentic game where the user can make real-life choices based on football logic," said EA SPORTS FIFA Lead Game Designer, Lewis Shaffer. "Our work from the past few years has helped us create a new all-encompassing game engine that can now build the decisions and actions we want the players to make." "The feedback on our Frostbite engine has allowed us to identify key areas in the development cycle for us to tweak and refine in order to deliver the best football gaming experience ever." FIFA 22 introduces "Ultimate Team" mode, which allows players to build a stable of footballing assets, and use that roster in a freemium competition to compete with friends and other players in the world. "Ultimate Team" Mode creates a deeper, more organic experience around the decisions and choices that a player makes, making every match a unique experience. "We listened to the community about what they wanted in FIFA Ultimate Team," said Chris Tully, Global Brand Director, Ultimate Team. "Through building the UTR, we can create more rewarding, longer lasting, deeper and fun experiences." For the first time in a FIFA game, a player can take control of any player in the game, direct their movements from the touchline, and make them more of a footballing power. FIFA 22 introduces "Real Player Motion," a new physics engine powered by a complex football-specific AI. The result is a more authentic, fluid and responsive on-field experience. FIFA 22 introduces "Evolutions," the new gameplay mechanic designed to add depth to FIFA 22. Players can unlock more than 250 player attributes that create new gameplay possibilities. FIFA 22 introduces "Dynamic Finishing Zones," which change on-the-fly depending on how hard the ball is struck and the speed of the attacker. FIFA 22 introduces the "Move Clock," which allows players to influence the speed of attacks by controlling when a striker sprints on the ball. Player intelligence has been increased in FIFA 22, resulting in more realistic player decisions and behavior.
