How can I enable the G+ privacy settings in my app?. Thank you for your time. A: This is not possible. You are free to know your users' Friends, but Facebook users are not free to know your users and you are free to know them, if you have that permission. But that is the extent of that permission - only that is allowed. Q: Why did not List of a object in itself be a List? As far as I can tell, List has an implicit val _$isInstanceOf[T] = new Array[T] is defined as a List of T. Why did not the compiler simply make all Lists be Lists? A: Why would anyone need such a thing? You can always check if a List is a List with isInstanceOf[List]. Of course, that test always returns true, so to be safe, you should check that the length of the list is equal to the declared length or else check for Nil. A: If someone wants a List[T], why not have both? List is a trait that doesn't have an implicit conversion from List to List. It doesn't make sense for them to have a type parameter so they could implement it, because it would double the code. Q: How can I show the current time and date in a TextField of a Python GUI application? I am writing a GUI application in Python. In the application, I would like to show the time and date in a TextField in the center. However, I do not know how to do that. Thanks for your help! A: Use from Tkinter import * root = Tk() root.title("Hello World!")

Is there a way to set programmatically Spring-managed properties, such as the bean name? Currently, I have something like: However, I would like to programmatically set this, so that I don't have to type objectName=MyObject in the xml file. A: It is possible to use the setter injection approach for this. Since @Imports(MyClass.class) is treated as a beansetter by Spring 3.0, you can set the bean with setObjectName method using, MyClass object = new MyClass(); object.setObjectName("Hello World"); A: The disadvantage of this approach is that spring will create only one instance of your object You may use properties-based autowiring.
