One of the problems I'm having is that some fields are compound maps/sets. For example: [:key "value" :otherkey ["value" :subkey]] Should I be creating a wrapper class that maps across a list of maps/sets or a map of objects instead? What would be a good design approach? A: You should look at the (or [; tag in the datalog language: (d/db-log :logic.equivalence [[:lhs "value" :rhs "value"] :lhs :otherkey ["value" :subkey]]]) You can nest any number of maps with this syntax: (:lhs "value" :rhs "value") (:lhs :otherkey ["value" :subkey]) ((:lhs :value :rhs :value) :otherkey ["value" :subkey]) If you prefer you can use datalog notation as well: /lhs=value and/rhs=value /lhs:otherkey="value" and:subkey /lhs:value=value and/rhs:value /lhs:value:otherkey="value" and:subkey /lhs:value=value and/rhs:value /lhs:value:otherkey="value" and:subkey You can find out more about this in the Data Logic Guide. Embedded Markov chain tree search Embedded Markov chain tree search (EMCTS) is an enhancement of Markov chain tree search designed to provide significantly improved search quality and guarantee termination in certain cases. This is accomplished by embedding an instance of the given game into an undirected tree, and then applying the Markov chain tree search algorithm to that tree. This way, if the player is able to win from any possible state he has seen in the past, he can do so with non-zero probability. There are known algorithms for embedding games into a tree structure 1cdb3666d
