Cambridge IT specialist Colin Robertson was in Germany when he felt a sharp pain in his chest. "I drove straight to the hospital and had an EKG. I never had chest pains before and had no reason to suspect anything was wrong so I figured it was indigestion," Mr Robertson said. The 39-year-old, who lives in the city, had an X-ray and was found to have a small lesion. A month later he was told the growth was the result of cancer. "They said that because of the location and the size of it it would be benign, but at that stage I thought nothing of it," he said. "They took biopsies and it was clear it was cancer. It was benign on CT scans but there was a good chance I was going to have to
