There has conventionally been known a space-divided pneumatic tire wherein a tread pattern is divided into a main tread portion and a sub-tread portion having a smaller width than the main tread portion. For example, a space-divided pneumatic tire disclosed in Japanese Unexamined Patent Application Publication No. 2008-108781, incorporated by reference, is known, wherein a tread pattern is divided into two parallel main tread portions in a central section in a width direction of the tire, with a sub-tread portion having a smaller width than the main tread portion formed so as to be divided from the main tread portion in the circumferential direction. However, in the above-described space-divided pneumatic tire, there is a possibility that the main tread portion formed on a central section is raised by a capstone rubber (thickening rubber) increasing tire rigidity so as to make a traction on a dry road uniform, when a road surface includes a road portion of which a width is decreased (particularly, a corrugation road portion such as a step of a guard rail). In the above-described space-divided pneumatic tire, it has been also known that a projection (groove) is formed in the main tread portion to enhance drainage. However, the above-described projection may disturb a wet road response such as a braking response, resulting in degraded traction on a wet road.

The event was attended by top EU officials, MEPs and high-level figures from the Maltese Government and business sector. Speaking at the conference which concluded on Wednesday at the OP conference centre, EFBD Chair, Dr Antonio Gambaro, said: "Many politicians and journalists speak of 'the island's crisis'. That is not an island problem; all of us together can solve it." The Malta Community at the EFBD Conference. (Image by Llukku Molina/EFBD) Noting that the government's latest policy document, "A New Malta: Planning the Future of our Island", highlighted many of the problems that are making development difficult, Dr Gambaro said that this was an opportunity to tackle them. "The crux of the problem is the lack of trust between the government, business and community which is preventing the island's economic development. This conference is an opportunity to explain to all of the dynamics involved and offer solutions for them. I hope that they will listen to what we say and we might actually see a change in attitudes," he said. Dr Angelo Farrugia, Head of the MCI, said that the development of Malta was the responsibility of all those involved on the island. "Malta is a very small country but it is well known for its talent, character and spirit. If we all pull in the same direction we can make the island not only a better place for living, but a better place to visit," he said. The conference was attended by the High Commissioner of the European Union to Malta, Daciana Octaviani, President of the European Commission's Economic and Financial Affairs Department, Mrs Sabine Weyand, EU Commissioner for Home Affairs and Citizenship
