and let the pixels vanish. If you want to bring the a priori expected logical outcome to the screen, then this is the way. Now let's have a look at the goal for Task 3 : The Golden Ratio is a mathematical concept that describes an intriguing statistical property of a set of numbers. The golden ratio is such that if you put an even number of elements in a row, and then double the number of elements in that row, the ratio between the number of elements on the top row and the number of elements on the bottom row is exactly 1.142857 (to three decimal places). So if you want to make sure that your output is beautiful and balanced, it is much better to have a bit more on the top row than on the bottom row. So on the larger screen with only 7 rows there would be 1.142360 in the top row, and 1.142350 in the bottom row. That's your feedback. I hope you will enjoy the experience of exploring the different ways to present your data. I am curious to see the results of the experiment, once you do them.
