I got a new job that requires a networking skills. And I don't really need a virtual assistant/secretary for other than online support from work. I'm new to using the internet (2 months) but have never used virtual assistants. I have a really slow DSL, but I'm going to get it fixed soon. What I really want to know is what is the best virtual assistant for me to use? Currently, I'm using: MySagmei (paid) with a bluegiga (4.5W) with bluegiga zero (2.0W). A: You don't say how slow your DSL is, but I've found it important to have hardware that's more than 2W (or, at least, close to the minimum) and for the online assistant to work well. I've had a regular phone line (which also can handle data calls) through a DSL modem (which can be as slow as 4.5W). I'd really suggest doing some research - the 2 lowest power Bluetooth headsets, e.g., the Bluegiga ZERO (1.0W) and Speedtalk Pro (2.5W) are the cheapest and have done me very well so far. I've used a Belkin BT Mobility 500 (15W) and it was very hard to get working in my home setup. Also, you could try a standard phone headset (with an adapter) if you don't want to use a BT system. One benefit of a BT headset is that it won't damage your DSL (which depends on the (rubbish) FCC's definition of "device"). A: I also really suggest to get a BT headset over the others. With a BT headset you can work from anywhere without having to connect the headset with a computer. Additionally, a BT headset is very comfortable and you don't need to plug the headset in a computer. I have a bluetooth headset and it runs on 2.5W, so you are safe no matter what you use. Oh, and if you get a BT headset, it will still work if you get wifi problems, as bluetooth is a mesh network. Towards a goal: understanding the link between resilience and goal persistence.
