Photoshop CS4 includes many useful features that are useful for beginners as well as power users. These new features include New Effects, Actions, Presets, Curves, Quick Selection, Layer Masks, Content-Aware Masks, and History. Fortunately, Photoshop is much more than the image-editing program that we present here. This chapter shows you many features that aren't commonly used, but can be very handy for some people. We also introduce a few new features that are beneficial to your knowledge of Photoshop. The main reason that Photoshop is so important is that it enables easy image editing. In this case, it's easy because Photoshop is designed to make it as easy as possible to save a final version. For example, it has a built-in dialogue box for setting up and saving a web page. Although Photoshop is a very powerful tool, it can also be intimidating to use for users who have never seen such a complex program. The other reason that Photoshop is so important is that every business and user in the world uses Photoshop in one way or another. It is the first tool a beginner will use to manipulate images. Some people will use Photoshop for all their manipulations, while others only use other tools like Gimp, but Photoshop is a very useful tool for people who want to manipulate their images. Even though Photoshop isn't the easiest image editing tool to use, it is still easy to master. You can learn to master Photoshop with the basics by starting with the upcoming sections of this chapter. Getting Started with Photoshop Photoshop is a rather large program and can seem daunting because of its complexity. However, it's easy to navigate and understand because it's designed to be easy to use — even for the beginning user. The following list describes some of the general capabilities of Photoshop. Basic tools: The menu has quite a few tools that you can use for manipulation and image creation. Here are some of the more useful tools that you may use in the next step. The tools you can use can be found in the toolbox on the right side of the program window, and in the main toolbox to the left. The main tools to use are the paintbrush, the eraser, and the lasso tool, as shown in Figure 9-1. Figure 9-1: These tools are pretty self-explanatory. Batch: The Batch tool allows you to save multiple images at one time

UN Environment, the United Nations Development Programme (UNDP), and the Pan American Health Organization (PAHO), today launched the "My Health, My Dignity" initiative to reduce the stigma and discrimination that hinder men's access to quality health services and prevent early mortality. UN Environment Executive Director, Achim Steiner, pledged that the first phase of the project will involve a programme of awareness-raising in major cities across Latin America and the Caribbean to make the public more aware of the specific health issues that men face, and to create enabling conditions to create supportive environments that break down male-dominated norms and barriers. Mortality rates for men in the region are 50 percent higher than for women, and disparities in health outcomes are linked to discrimination of men stemming from their gender identity, socio-economic factors, or location within a household. "Today we launch a global initiative to break the stigma that prevents men from accessing better health care," said Achim Steiner. "This is a simple yet life-saving idea, and with UNDP's support, we hope it will be translated into concrete programmes and national commitments across the region in the coming months and years." "We must start working together now to change gender norms and structures that put men and boys in harms way," said UNDP Administrator, Achim Steiner. "Through this initiative we hope to change thousands of lives that begin before birth and thus change the trajectory of so many lives and communities." This is just the start of the first phase of the project, but it will be augmented by a truly unique and peer-to-peer matching process between UNEP and PAHO. This matching process will involve 20 cities (10 countries), including the first-ever city-to-city match between cities in Panama and Nicaragua; and the first-ever city-to-city match between Panama and Argentina. Once the regional participation process is completed, UNEP and PAHO will introduce a standardised methodology and approach for cities to become 'Men's Health Facilitators', which will provide an evidence-based peer-to-peer learning environment for cities to come up with their own plans for reducing the gap in men's health outcomes. "The UNDP and PAHO are pleased to be working together on this important initiative," said Pedro Rossello, PAHO's Director
