Merging layers After you have your image loaded, you can place an object on the canvas. You can select an existing object from the Layers palette or select the Move tool (Ctrl+T) and click on an existing object to place it on the canvas. There are different options available for objects on the canvas. You can move the object by clicking a point on the canvas and dragging it. You can also resize the object by dragging the corners. You can move the object by using the Move tool, but you also have to use the Ctrl key to lock the object in place while you move it. This option also makes sure that your changes won't be applied to other layers of the image. If you want to make a copy of an existing object, you can

Solution structure and binding site of a small fragment of the yeast HSP26 heat-shock protein. Heat-shock proteins are a heterogeneous group of proteins whose expression is stimulated in response to a variety of stress conditions. HSP26 is a heat-inducible molecular chaperone expressed predominantly during the yeast response to heat shock (Lalier, J., Bruice, E., Vilar, P., and Melki, J. (1985) Biochemistry 24, 1351-1359). The solution conformation of the small heat shock protein fragment [(alpha 1-15), Val-Ile-Ser-Asn-Glu-Glu-Glu-Gly-Leu-Asp-Leu-Glu-Gln-Ala-Ala] was investigated by <sup>1</sup>H nuclear magnetic resonance spectroscopy. The 15 residue peptide adopts a well-defined solution structure consisting of a kinked amphipathic helix that is stabilized by a hydrophobic core of residues Cys-2, Ile-4, Phe-6, Ile-7, Leu-8, and Ile-10. The amphipathic helix of the peptide inserts into the lipid acyl chain region of large unilamellar vesicles composed of either dimyristoyl-phosphatidylcholine or phosphatidylethanolamine. A sulfhydryl group of Cys-2 is essential for binding, and the tight contact of the peptide with the membrane surface is stabilized by a network of two and more hydrogen bonds with Cys-2, Ile-7, and Leu-8. The high affinity peptide binding to the phospholipid bilayer is corroborated by the value of the dissociation constant (KD) being close to the value of the peptide stoichiometry. The helical region of the peptide adopts an amphipathic structure similar to the lipid binding domains of other proteins of the DnaJ family. Furthermore, the peptide is shown to bind to a non-native form of the human globular beta-casein (beta-c) protein. The results are discussed in relation to the possible role of this type of heat-shock protein in the cell as a general molecular chaperone. Phytoplankton A phytoplankton is one of the smallest
