The post-doctoral training proposed will allow the applicant to integrate approaches from genetics, biochemistry, cell biology, and genetics to study the biology of c-myc expression and its possible involvement in gene regulation in mammalian cells. The specific aims of the project are to: (1) determine the effect of trans-acting and cis-acting DNA binding factors on c-myc transcription; (2) define cis-acting DNA sequences within the mouse mammary tumor virus (MMTV) promoter that interact with transcription factors to allow myc expression to occur at high levels; (3) identify trans-acting factors that can alter expression of the c-myc gene in transient transfection assays; and (4) identify trans-acting factors that alter c-myc expression in stably transformed cell lines. A widely used approach to study the activity of genes within mammalian cells is to express trans-acting factors that can alter the activity of the genes of interest in culture. This approach has been extremely successful with the c-myc gene. However, the majority of these studies have relied on over-expression of trans-acting factors (by either viral or chemical induction). With this approach, the activity of the gene is severely perturbed and is difficult to interpret. The proposed research will use a new system to study the activity of genes by expressing factors in stable cell lines. This approach makes it possible to study the activity of genes during steady-state expression. Such studies will allow the investigator to learn how the activity of the genes is controlled within a cellular environment that mimics the environment in which the genes function in vivo. In addition, certain factors that alter the expression of the genes of interest in transient expression assays will be assessed for their ability to alter the expression of the genes in vivo. Playlists that are linked to most games can be linked to with. Wednesday, July 2, 2008 Don't Leave Me So this is the first time I have been alone for a week, and I must say it is crazy. So many emotions come into play while you're alone. You see you guys don't really know what to do with yourself because there is nothing in the house for you to do, since you are home alone all day. To make things worse, I am sick, and it seems that it is all over the house. Why is it that when I am sick, everything is dirty? My house is gross, because my house is my territory. You would think that I would clean up all the places you guys are supposed to be, but I can't seem to get it together while I'm this sick. So all the guys at the house are gone to work, which is the reason why I was home today. So it's quiet and I have all this time to just go through my brain. Well I am sick, so I don't have a good head to be able to plan what I am going to do. I figured that since I'm so sick I would just stay in bed and watch tv. I would totally do that if I wasn't sick. I guess I shouldn't complain, I mean, everyone else has a job and a life to go to. You know what, even though I was really sick I think it's more that I'm not used to being alone. I used to be with someone all day everyday. It's just one of those things, you have to learn how to handle it. This week should have me going insane, so next week I will be happy and well rested and in good spirits.
