Q: Data bound combobox does not reload correctly I have an WPF application that is using MVVM. I have a combobox that is data bound to an observable collection and I need to have it refresh when the observable collection changes. The problem I am having is that it does not refresh at the right time. I have a button that is bound to a Command. When a item is selected in the combobox, it should remove the selected item from the list and update the SelectedIndex. This works correctly in most cases, but it also fails on some scenarios. At the point that the SelectedIndex is changed, the UI is having issues displaying the new selected item as well. If the user clicks the button before the item is selected, then the UI is updated to the new item and the SelectedIndex is updated as expected. However, if the user selects an item and then clicks the button before the observable collection has an update, the button won't click. I believe this is because the UI does not know the new selected item until the observable collection updates after it fires the OnPropertyChanged event on the CollectionChanged event. Is there a way for me to notify the UI of the changes to my observable collection without firing the OnPropertyChanged? Here is some XAML showing how I setup the combobox:
