"Motion capture is an incredibly powerful tool that can accurately map the movement of the player across a variety of situations, which we used in FIFA 19 to a degree but we have really taken it to a new level in FIFA 22," says Harvey Elliott, the Senior Gameplay Designer on the FIFA Team. The HyperMotion capture data powers an authentic and dynamic animation system that allows players to naturally move around the pitch in environments and situations that would otherwise be impossible or unrealistic. As players make more headway into the match, they perform more realistic movements and their animations become more fluid and natural, and players have more control over their body and movements. The data can be combined with a wide array of animations, with an emphasis on fluidity. Players are able to run, jump and move with impressive accuracy and fluidity, especially in tight quarters where the technology enables players to duck into holes and unblock. The technology also makes it possible to create a variety of animations that would not otherwise be possible using existing animation technologies. The data collected from the matches was made publicly available so that other developers could build upon the data, such as VilaFootball for FUT Classics. VilaFootball is a popular community mod for FIFA Ultimate Team that is currently already used in real-life matches. In addition, the data is now available to any developer who wishes to use it. Players will be able to utilise animations in FIFA 22 by accessing a new comprehensive animation set in the FIFA Ultimate Team Manager. Key features include additional animations for every player, more realistic behaviours, and animations that were previously impossible to execute. * FIFA Ultimate Team is an online card game that includes single-player and multiplayer modes. Online multiplayer matches can either be kicked off with new matches in a match lobby, or created on-the-fly with the 'Create A Match' feature. Online matches can be played in private mode, up to 16 players in a customisable lobby, or up to 32 players with the normal servers. * FIFA Ultimate Team Manager The FIFA Team has introduced an in-game tool, the FIFA Ultimate Team Manager, that allows players to create an unlimited number of in-game accounts and easily manage them. A rich and powerful management system is brought to the game in the form of the FIFA Ultimate Team Manager, which allows players to effortlessly manage all of their in-game accounts. The player can manage all of their in-game accounts
