Syzygy Support Ultimate DVR/IEEE 1101 Transceiver Airplay Two-Way Audio Google Chrome Google Chrome is a free and open-source web browser developed by the Google Inc. team as the default browser of the Google Chrome OS. It's based on the WebKit layout engine and the Blink rendering engine. Chrome is currently developed for Windows, macOS, Linux and Chrome OS. It is considered to be one of Google's fastest browsers. It is intended to be an "all-around browser", although it does not have features only found in other browsers, such as tabbed browsing, a built-in email client, an integrated instant messaging client, access to Digital Rights Management-protected content in the form of extensions, and an integrated media platform. Chrome has a minimalistic design, with most functionality accessible from a small toolbar. IE 9 IE 9 is a discontinued web browser from Microsoft. It was the successor to Internet Explorer 8. Like its predecessor, it is based on Trident web engine. IE 9 was generally seen as a successor to Internet Explorer 8; however, the development schedule was significantly delayed, and the project was cancelled. Microsoft instead released versions of Internet Explorer 10 and later, which were based on their newer Chakra web engine, the successor to Trident. IE 9 is part of the Windows XP support period and is not available for download from Microsoft's website, Microsoft offers version 9 to OEMs and partners for testing and evaluation purposes. I've had this thing for a while and have put it off installing and using until I needed some special form fill in IE and thought of typing it into the html box. After a quick search I found the software, grabbed it and tried it out. It's well made and does its job very well. Looks nice too, and something that makes you go "Hey, what a cool idea!" By the way, it works for any browser, so, if you're a Firefox user, you could give it a go. By the way, it works for any browser, so, if you're a Firefox user, you could give it a go. Dave Thanks Dave, this will certainly come in useful when I need to create a form for my.htm file. I'm not sure what you mean by the "html box" - I'm not trying to manipulate the HTML code at all, just translating text to my own language... "if you're a Firefox user, you could give it a go." - I'm not a Firefox user, I'm a Opera user, so, what could I possibly do with this that I can't do with Opera? When I say it works for "any browser" what exactly do you mean? IE5? IE6?[Cardiac calcium metabolism in chronic hemodialysis patients].
