Pakistan has taken its biggest step towards delinking key parts of its economy from the dollar so it can trade on a par with emerging markets. The decision was taken after a meeting on Thursday between Prime Minister Imran Khan and the executives of the State Bank of Pakistan at the Prime Minister House. The Pakistan rupee has appreciated by more than 23% against the dollar over the past six months, just as investor confidence in emerging markets has been shaken by the contagion from the US-China trade war. As local manufacturers struggle to get credit, the government has tried to play down the currency risk by, for example, slapping 5% tax on imports of dollars. But to avoid hurting its trade, the government has maintained a "floating" exchange rate, which means its peso is allowed to fluctuate within a narrow band against the dollar as market conditions dictate. The government's decision means that it will not be swapping billions of dollars in dollars for rupees. Instead, it will be setting the value of its own foreign currency assets with the market. It is also thought that the decision could pave the way for the de-dollarisation of the trade of agricultural products and raw materials. This is the first such action by a major emerging economy. Going forward, Pakistan needs to tackle several economic and financial challenges. Imports are still growing In the second quarter of 2019, Pakistan's merchandise imports were $9.9bn - up 1.4% over the year before. So far this year, imports are up 3.9%. Pakistan's exports were relatively quiet this year, according to World Bank figures, with trade buoyant at $5.7bn. But its exports to China are down 30% from 2018. That means that imports have increased despite a strategy to reduce non-essential trade with China. Pakistan's

var myArray = new Array(); myArray[0] = 'a'; myArray[1] = 'b'; myArray[2] = null; if( myArray[0] === 'a' || myArray[1] === 'b') { // do something }

 If someone could help me with this it will help me a lot! Thanks in advance. A: You could just do a simple eval on the array element:

var first = eval(myArray[0]); if( first === "a") { // run code } else if( first === "b") { // run code } else { // run code } you should be aware that this is evil and should be avoided at all costs Q: Kernel Check Platform_kdc. Does this information actually exist on the partition? I have to build a Windows Server 2003/2008 KDC, but I have no free time, so it makes more sense to just install an OS on a Virtual Machine. Unfortunately, it seems that the BIOS doesn't support VM runing. To turn off the domain controller, I have to use a command like this:

powershell.exe -command "& { Read-Host 'Press Enter to disable domain controller.' }

 But there is no Host and only a plain text. Does anyone know what it can be or how to turn it off that way? I am not using the Windows Server for anything and just created it for development/testing purposes. Thanks for reading. A: Yes, there are 2 partition. One is called "Microsoft Reserved" and the other "System Reserved". If you are creating a new virtual machine, the you
