Samsung Electronics Co., the world’s biggest smartphone maker, has started developing a new quantum-dot display that uses a new type of phosphorescent light to render brighter images without consuming more electricity. The tech, which is still under development, could combine the advantages of a conventional screen with those of quantum dots, which are hundreds of times more efficient than traditional phosphorescent lights. The experiments are continuing at the Korea Advanced Institute of Science and Technology (KAIST) in Daejeon, South Korea, a Samsung spokesman said. Another advantage is that the new type of quantum dots is emitted light that’s similar to normal ambient light, which is very different from the glaring white light of traditional phosphorescent materials, the spokesman said. That’s why the new display could render much brighter images without consuming electricity and leading to higher battery life.The present invention relates to a method and a device for determining a preferred elevation for the clearance of a continuous casting plant. Continuous casting plants for casting metal melts, especially for casting steel, are usually equipped with machines for continuous casting, which machines have continuous casting molds, which are moved through a mold guide. The mold guide is provided with continuously moving mold-side support rollers that are arranged at a pre-determined, already-fixed distance from one another. The support rollers are rotatably supported on a continuous casting plant. The material of the continuous casting plant is continuously heated. A free space is maintained between the rollers and the mold in order to allow a gap, in which the cast product can be taken out from the mold. The fixed distance between the mold-side support rollers is used to determine the clearance, which is also referred to as the protrusion. The protrusion can have values of ± 0.5 mm, ± 0.8 mm, or ± 1.2 mm. The clearance between the mold support rollers and the mold should be specifically determined so that the metal melt can flow through the gap and be cooled down in the least turbulent fashion. A greater clearance can result in a turbulent cooling of the metal melt; this can lead to a rejection of the cast product. With a smaller protrusion, there is a higher risk of clogging. Determining the protrusion requires the use of casting-plant-side measuring and/or adjusting devices. These devices detect, among other things, the deviation of the fixed distance between the

The city of Scott is warning about a potential health hazard in the city as dumpsters grow heavier and heavier. “The load is very heavy and they fall over and the materials spill out,” said city engineer Joe Moore. Scott sanitation drivers say trucks can have as much as 400 pounds of manure. Typically, haulers load it onto flatbeds and then deliver it to the landfill. But the trucks do not have any stability from the weight. “The load will fall forward. The load will have to be constantly kept on the side of the truck so that it does not fall forward and cause a spill,” said Moore. The city is asking dumpsters to be inspected and a dumpster is currently under investigation. If it is found that there is an excessive amount of manure, the city will inspect the dumpster to make sure it is safe and contain it. “The city will come and make the dumpster safe as soon as possible,” said Moore. “If they can't make the dumpster safe we will haul it to the landfill and have it hauled there.” The city is also asking haulers to report large animals that they see roaming the streets, or are going into the dumpsters. “They can walk around and feed off of manure. That is a health hazard for people and the city will step in and make sure that animals are kept away from the dumpsters,” said Moore. Moore says the city is also looking into buying dumpsters with three wheels to help deal with the hauling problem./ * * Copyright (c) Facebook, Inc. and its affiliates. * * This source code is licensed under the MIT license found in the * LICENSE file in the root directory of this source tree. */ #pragma once #include #include #include #include #include #include #include #include #include
