

Learn German with these 10 tips

Here are 10 German study tips.

1. Set goals and create a plan of study

It is not possible to learn German in a day. You should first get an overview of the German language. Then, divide it into smaller categories. Make a list of all the topics that you would like to cover and decide when to begin. Be realistic and don't put too much pressure on yourself. You can learn German more easily if you take it step-by-step rather than in two weeks. You can also manage your time and monitor your progress with a study plan. It is important to consider your goals and the reasons why you want to learn German. You can write it on paper and refer to it whenever your motivation wanes. 2. Regularly improve your German by studying regularly

Everyone knows that some days you don't want to study, and other days you are able to spend hours studying vocabulary and grammar. It is essential to regularly study. You can study German in smaller segments but more frequently.

3. Eliminate all disruptive factors when learning

You have now gathered your study materials and are ready for the day. Your best friend calls and asks about your school day. You have to answer immediately, and you can put off the German assignment. Avoid such situations by helping yourself. Let your friends know you won't be available for an hour. You will quickly realize that even though it may seem difficult at first, your study sessions are more effective.

4. Learn German words using their correct article

Articles are important in German. When you are learning vocabulary, you should always remember to use the correct article. Not only "Haus" but also "das Haus". (: home) but "das Haus". You will save a lot later on if you start this way. Also, I recommend that you learn the plural right away. This would be "das Haus" (the house) and "die Hauser". (Eng. (Eng.

5. Make some useful study tools

Write down important words or phrases on a sheet of paper. Use a poster or a post-it to do this. Place this magic list in your apartment. Select places that you frequent, such as next to your coffee machine, above your stove, on your toilet, or on the mirror. You will see the list every time you visit one of these locations.

6. Outwit your brain with these simple memory hooks

Some words, rules, or phrases will simply not stick in your head. Even if you have tried to memorize the words, they will disappear on your next morning. Memory hooks make it much easier to learn, and to remember. Mnemonics help us understand context and remember information more easily.

7. Sketches and notes to help you.

Each of us has our own learning style and strategy for learning a new language. It can be helpful to visualize the situation. If you are having trouble understanding something, make notes. You could find it helpful to use different colours or index cards. This helps you to develop your imagination, and it draws your focus to the important things. Visualizations make complex statements simple and easy to understand. You can also get a better understanding of the subject matter. Imagine the German grammar which is not only confusing but also extremely extensive. You can divide the grammar up into smaller categories or groups and then use different colors to indicate them. Underline the correct color in a German sentence.

8. Use a highlighter to emphasize the most important information

Highlighting the most important points in a text is a good idea. Highlighting phrases is a way to decide what information is most important. You will also improve your memory. It will be easier to repeat what you already know in the future, and it will increase the fun factor. Who wouldn't be happy to have a faster learning effect? Be careful: the principle is that less is more. The entire German text will not have any learning effect if it is colored.

9. Give your brain a break from time to time

It is best to take a break after a 40- to 50-minute intensive study session to reenergize. You should not consider a break to be "lost time" because you need to process what you've learned before your brain is able absorb new information. Open your windows and get some fresh air. You need oxygen for your brain to work effectively, and this will help you concentrate. Stay hydrated when studying.

10. Watch movies and television series in German

Can you study while watching television? It is possible. Movies and TV shows can be used to learn in the age of DVDs, Video-on Demand providers and other alternatives. Check first in what languages the content is available. You can also watch your favorite series in German, so that you can enjoy the subtitles. You will learn the vocabulary without having to think about it. It is also a great way to improve your listening, understanding and pronunciation skills.
